

America's hotels are innovating, adapting, and working to give guests the "responsible stay" they're looking for.

Responsible Sourcing

By sourcing responsibly and prioritizing sustainability in our supply chains, America's hotels are making a positive environmental and social impact through our purchasing power.

America's hotels know that our commitment to sustainability doesn't end on property. That's why the hotel industry is committed to responsible sourcing to promote the reduction of environmental and social impact at every level of the supply chain.

Working with suppliers, we can address environmental and social issues beyond our own operations. We are doing this by promoting social responsibility across the supply chain, including human and labor rights, worker health and safety, and animal welfare.

The emissions impact of our collective supply chains is significant, so that is why we're committed to reducing emissions related to our purchased goods and services, including the emissions generated from their manufacturing, transportation, storage, usage, and disposal.

From purchasing eco-friendly cleaning supplies to sourcing farm to table food for our hotel restaurants, we know we can make our supply chains more responsible. Whether it's our focus on high priority or impact issues and categories such as animal proteins or food service disposables, by working closely with our suppliers and partners to promote responsible sourcing, America's hotels are lessening our environmental impact and reducing our carbon footprint far beyond our properties.

"As businesses work toward a more sustainable future, the suppliers, products and services they choose play a major role in how transformative they can be. Smart policies – from businesses, suppliers and governments – are instrumental in supporting this work. America's hotels, through Responsible Stay, are leading the way on transformational change needed to achieve a more sustainable and carbon-free future. We can all work together to incentivize sustainable sourcing that spans from energy to the food we source, to encourage broader adoption of clean energy sourcing practices, and to push forward on this transformative change."

— Avendra

To learn more, visit ResponsibleStay.org